MUSICAL STARS ARE HEARD IN RECITAL

Mme. Julia Culp, Miss Katharine Goodson, and Coenraad V. Bos Please Capital Music-lovers.

PROGRAM SHOWS WIDE RANGE

One of the choicest of the musical events of the season took place yesterday afternoon at the New National Theater, when Madame Julia Culp and Miss Katharine Goodson, gave a song and piano recital, each undisputed queen of her special realm.

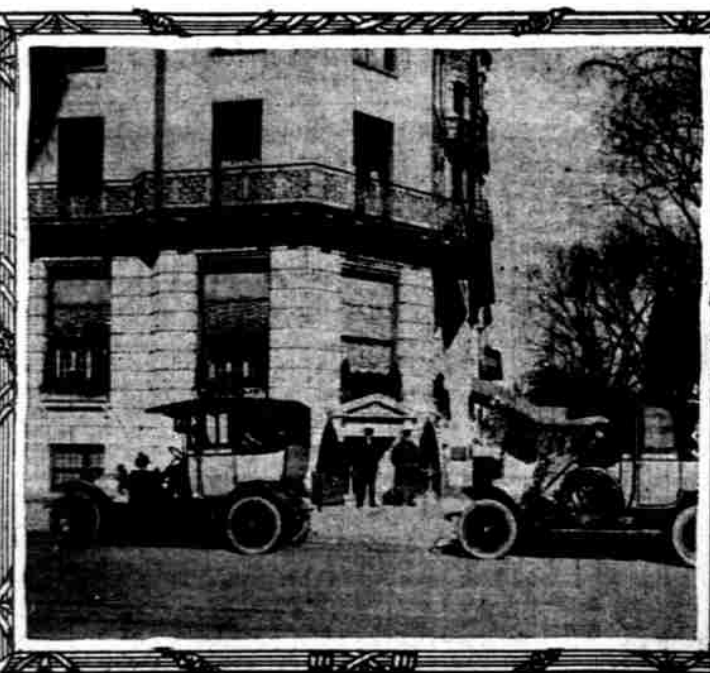

It may be said here that Mr. Coenraad V. Bos, accompanist, is equally supreme in his department of music, a department that rises higher and higher in the artistic scale as the great song writers are increasingly cultivated. Yesterday Madame Culp sang from two of these great song writers: four songs of Schubert, and four of Hugo Wolf, the greatest of all song writers. A group of old English and Welsh songs divided the Schubert and Wolf groups.

For creating a divinely tender mood with the meepest, most classic means, Mme. Culp's "Du bist die Ruh" of Schubert, and the "Verborgene Welt" and "Er ist" of Hugo Wolf are not to be surpassed. Hugo Wolf, more uniformly than any other song writer, uses his accompaniment as an aid in creating atmosphere, in which the voice moves as only a more definite, more concrete interpretation of the poem. Mme. Culp's part in these songs is to idealize in the highest possible degree the dramatic expression. Her ideal characterization of the "Mausfänger-sprache" and the self-conscious answer of "In dem schatten meiner Locken" were the highest idealization of realism. Mme. Culp's interpretation of the simple spirit of the old English ballad is as perfect as her enunciation of the English verse. For the queen of German lieder to express with such marvelous truth the unaffected sweetness of the simplest of English household songs is a triumph. Mme. Culp responded to the enthusiasm over her group of "All Through the Night," "Away, Away," "The Drink to Me Only," and "The Rose Tree" with "Long, Long Ago."

Miss Goodson played the Sonata in A Major of Mozart, a Barcarolle of Rubinstein, "Etude Arabesque," by Hinton; Liszt's "Tarentelle," and a Chopin group, comprising the Berceuse, the studies in A flat and C, Valse in A flat, and a Polonaise, Op. 52. Miss Goodson gave a fundamentally ideal conception of Mozart. The delicacy with which she molds the outlines, the clear lucidity of her phrasing, the simple vigor with which she played the "Rondo Alla Turca," bringing out a broad, splendid tone, a triumph of her technique, which seems to be without bounds or limitation. He climaxes in the Polonaise were marvelous of the urging forward and final deluge of tonal volume. In this work, as well, she displayed a fine sense of shading. In the Etude "Arabesque," again, purity of line and delicacy of tone came out in her playing.

VOTES OR FIGHT, WOMEN'S THREAT

thing of them for forty years without a vote.

Mrs. Benedict did not answer the question directly, but Representative Chandler, Progressive, of New York, asked, "Since the grand old Republican party has failed and the Democrats seem disposed to fail as well, why should not the women of this country join the progressive party, which favors woman suffrage?"

"I am giving away none of my plans today," but you must remember that the question of woman suffrage is no longer one of right or justice, or principle alone, but it is today a matter of political expediency."

Mrs. Antoinette Funk, speaking for the National Association for Woman Suffrage, told the committee that it is not easy for the women of the country to understand why men are unwilling to change the Constitution wherein women are practically denied justice. On this point the committee took issue with Mrs. Funk. An extended colloquy in which several Democratic members participated followed, and the attention of the suffragists was called to the often-repeated statement of the anti-suffragists that legislation of a remedy for the wrongs of the past several years has advanced women's rights, exclusive of the right of suffrage, as well in States where there is no suffrage as in the most advanced suffrage States of the Union.

McCoy, of New Jersey, insisted that the legal rights of women were as well if not better subserved by the State laws of New Jersey and New York as they are by the laws of Colorado, where women have voted for twenty-five years.

Remember Idea of November.

Other suffragists speakers in turn were Dr. Cora Smith King, who warned the Judiciary Committee that it should be no longer the "graveyard committee of the House," where suffrage bills and resolutions are buried. "I want to remember the idea of November. The women voters advise you to act speedily and favorably upon the suffrage amendment. If you do not the women themselves may become your court of last resort."

Mrs. William Kent read to the committee some of the bills passed by the last California legislature showing the influence of the balloting women. She said:

"You may say that laws of this land are being passed in women suffrage States, but a great wave of progressive democracy is sweeping over the country, bringing a greater justice and a larger opportunity to all the people."

A big delegation of women from various States appeared before the committee to reply to the arguments advanced at the morning session by the supporters of the proposed woman suffrage amendment to the Federal Constitution.

Miss Minnie Brown, secretary of the National Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, who charged the suffragists with using Congress as an advertisement, said:

"I want to call your attention to the fact that the suffragists are using the Federal government for the purpose of advertising their views through the speeches they make here. I don't know whether you call that petty grafting or not."

Mrs. Dodge in Charge.

The hearing of the national association by the committee was under the control of the speakers introduced by Mrs. Dodge, who said in introducing the speakers:

"I arrived here in time this morning to hear some of the speakers of the suffragists. I think members of the committee can well afford to disregard these threats. They cannot be taken as serious or grave because the suffragists have failed to agree among themselves on so many points that they probably could not agree on how to carry out a threat even if they had the power."

Among the speakers introduced by Mrs. Dodge were Mrs. Henry White, of the executive committee of the Massachusetts State association; Miss Alice Hill Chittenden, president of the New York State association; Miss Marjorie Dorman, secretary of the Women Wage Earners Anti-Suffrage League of New York, and John Matthews, of Newark, N. J., and John R. Doe, of New York.

"Our fundamental claim before you," Miss Chittenden began her remarks, "is that each State has a right to decide this question for itself. The women of New York, whom we represent, do not want the legislatures of other States to manage the electorate of New York State."

Asked why she opposed giving the privilege of the vote to women, she explained: "In the final analysis, the real responsibility of maintaining the operation of the State—in war or in peace—rests upon the courage of men. We are told that women can fight. Unfortunately, this is true. But the armed Amazon or the strident Xanthippe is hardly a type of womanhood to be desired."

Believes in Women's Rights.

Mrs. White, of Massachusetts, said:

"This is not a question of what women want or of what men want, but it is a question of the good of the State. And we insist that the good of the State requires that women be kept out of politics. I want to emphasize the fact that, while we oppose suffrage, we believe absolutely in women's rights, and we are convinced that today nothing stands in the way of women except their own mental and physical limitations. As to power, woman's greatest power is nonpartisan power."

"We resent the attempts of the suffragists to exploit us as arguments in support of their propaganda," declared Mrs. Dorman, speaking for wage-earning women. "Working women get more protection under the law than do the working men. Women, without the ballot, have reached this state, and it is for this reason that the practical working woman does not regard the ballot as either desirable or advantageous."

Mr. Matthews addressed himself to the legal aspects of the question and denied the justice of the proposition to allow three-fourths of the States, whose boundaries might include a minority of the country's population, to regulate the electorates of a minority of the States which might have a population majority."

Dr. Mary Walker, attired in a dress suit and wearing her civil war medal on the lapel of her swallow-tail coat, attended the hearing. She was opposed to the enactment of the resolution she said. The suffragists refused to admit her to use her time, and she said she favored the ballot for women, she could not be accorded time by the anti-suffragists. The committee granted her fifteen minutes, which she occupied by telling them that there was no need for the amendment, as the right of women to vote was not open to argument, anyhow. It never had been legally taken away from women, according to Dr. Walker, and she heard her contention upon the fact that when New Jersey joined the union by adopting the Constitution, women voted in that State and the right was not legally taken from them until long afterward. The committee listened to the aged war nurse with grave courtesy and the doctor seemed thoroughly to enjoy herself.

In the course of the hearings of both sides there was much disorder in the committee room. Chairman Clayton tried and tried again gently to persuade the audience, which numbered several hundred, to preserve decorum. His efforts were unavailing for a chorus of hisses and mock applause greeted the points made by the anti-suffragists, while the suffragists were having their sayings. Representative J. Thomas Heflin spoke for the anti-suffragists and Representative Mondell, of Wyoming, pleaded the cause of the suffragists.
